

Abstract

Control of bioactivity in 3D space remains a central challenge in drug delivery. We will present an approach for the functionalization of cell surfaces with drugs. The resulting 'living drugs' retain biological activity, and their movement could be directed by external stimuli such as light.